what ought properly to be charged to opera-tion account and thereby inflating the value of the equipment for which the city would have to pay when it took over the road at the end of the seventy-five year lease. Counsel for the Inter-Met on Wednesday contended that the city would pay for nothing but the tangible equipment owned by the company, and that even this property would be paid for only at an appraisal made under the supervision of the Supreme

At the opening of yesterday's session Mr. Ivins told the commission that as the contract provided that the city should purchase "at a fair valuation" the entire equipment of the company including power houses, rolling stock, tools, appliances and all real estate of which such an equipand all real estate of which such an equip-ment was a part, the presumption was that the expenditures of the company which had been placed under the head of the equipment and which had no right there would have to be taken into consideration when the appraisal was made One new point made by Mr. Ivins yes terday in connection with the making up f the construction account was that which apparently had nothing to do with the subway and which amounted to $23,644 had been added to the cost as it appears on the books of the company of the equipment of the subway.

The greater part of yesterday's session was given over to inquiring into the operating of the subway. Chairman Willcox and Mr. Ivins were anxious to ascertain from Mr. Bryan if the use of a side door car in the subway would not be advisable and tend to more rapidity in the move-ment of trains. Mr. Bryan contended that the traffic conditions in this city and the curved platforms at the express sta-tions in the subway would not permit of the use of the side door cars with safety. the use of the side door cars with safety.

"Take the case of the Illinois car," said Mr. Bryan. "On the Illinois Central when a train pulls into the station they take everybody that is on the platform, the man can see everybody is aboard and close his train. He does not have a lot of wild people as we have in New York, running down the stairs three steps at a time, who rush up and put their foot in to keep them from closing the door, to get in. We have men who have had their arms broken and men who have been struck trying to keep men who have been struck trying to keep Commissioner Willcox asked if this diffi-Commissioner Willcox asked if this diffi-culty could not be overcome by having the side door cars, such as are used in Boston, with a platform man to look after the closing of the doors. Mr. Bryan replied that to use the side door cars it would be necessary to have a moving sort of shelf to fill up the gap between the car and the platform caused by the acute curves in most of the subway stations.

"That:gap platform must be drawn in under the station platform," Mr. Bryan said, "before the train can go, and while the man at the side door is giving the signal to draw back the shooting platform the danger is that some one might attempt to board that train. Standing on that moving floor he might be pushed off by the crowds which surge around such stations at Forty-second street and Brooklyn Bridge. Four-teenth street is one of the places where we would have to put it, and South Ferry and that has been our objection to it. We feel so strongly about it. I mean we men have been operating these roads in York, that we would fear to take an order from the commission to do that. anybody unless it was an order.

anybody unless it was an order. I consider it absolutely dangerous to do it."

Mr. Bryan told the commission that the service of the subway could be vastly increased if the platforms were lengthened so as to allow of the running of trains with more cars than now. Mr. Bryan also said that the company could improve its service if it could build the terminals it had planned for at Dyckman street in The planned for at Dyckman street, in The Bronx, on land which the company had paid for out of its own pocket but had been pre-vented building upon because of the oppo-sition of the local authorities.

"Suppose," asked Mr. Ivins, starting a formidable hypothetical question, "you had the local stations extended to 400 feet; suppose you had certain of the express stations so altered as to give you additional station room; suppose you were to so arrange that during the rush hours there should be no direct transfer from locals should be no direct transfer from locals to express trains, and suppose that you were to put in operation all the new cars which you are now constructing and hope to put in operation some-time at least early next year, how much would those matters as a whole in your judgment increase your facility for the carrying of passengers in the present subways as they exist, barring the particular changes that I have spoken of and always assuming also the you had the station for the handling of your cars that you speak of as a terminal at Dyckman street?"

"I think," said Mr. Bryan, "it would increase the present capacity of the subway nearly one hundred million passengers per annum."

"That would be how much in terms of percentage?"
"It would be close to 75 per cent.," answered Mr. Bryan.

Minority Stockholders Engage Counsel to Resist Dividend Reduction.

The minority stockholders of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company have engaged counsel to defend their rights in the event that the New York City Railway Company, which leases the Metro-politan, should pass entirely or reduce the 7 per cent, dividend which it is commonly supposed to have guaranteed on the Metropolitan stock. George S. Graham, a lawyer of 42 Broadway, has been retained

It was hinted yesterday that the agreement between the New York City Railway and the Metropolitan was not on the basis of a hard and fast guarantee of 7 per cent. on the stock. It was suggested that this rate could be reduced without abrogating lease, and that in view of the fact that Metropolitan was not earning any-g like 7 per cent., and was the weak in the Interborough-Metropolitan system this would be more than likely to happen. To prevent this the minority stockholders got together.

This elicited laughter and cheers from the delegates, but when the Government of Wurtemberg, in which State Stuttgart is, heard of Mr. Quelch's slur on the conference it did not take a humorous view of it, but sent word to the congress that unless the expression "thieves' supper" was with-drawn and Quelch apologized he would be

At to-day's session of the congress Quelch refused to apologize, saying that his words had been mistranslated by the translator who had put them into French. He said he had not called the diplomatiets at The Hague murderers and thieves. He had spoken only of a thieves' supper. which he said was a common expression with English Socialists in describing a meeting of representatives of capitalistic interests. WONDERFUL BRAVERY IN THE ATTACK ON THE FRENCH.

Led by a Kald in Red They Dashed in a Solid Mass Through a Hail of Fire to Within 400 Yards of the French Trenches -Leader the Last to Turn Back

Special Cable Despotch to THE SUN. CASABLANCA, Aug. 22. The features of vesterday's attack were the reckless courage of the Moors and the comparative inefficiency of the French fire. Once during the fight a great horde of Arab horsemen, headed by a Kaid dressed entirely in red. galloped against the French position over open country in close formation, ignoring all modern laws of attack.

They formed a solid target for the gunners at a range of only 1,500 yards. Every gun on the warships and ashore opened fire on them, and in a moment the cavalry were riding amid a torrent of bursting shells and shrapnel. The ground around them seemed itself to be bursting and throwing up missiles, but the phalanx came on. Some of the shells fell short, others went wide, while still others went too far over their heads.

At last a big shell from the cruiser Gloire landed in the middle of the Arabs. It was the first telling shot. Many riders and horses fell. Some rose again and remounted and other staggered away wounded. Many It seemed as if nothing could daunt

They at length came into a range at which the French infantry joined in pouring into them volley after volley from their rifle and mitrailleuses, but not wthstanding this he Moors came within 400 yards of French trenches before they wavered.

Further effort was beyond their power Their horses were spent, and many of them were riderless The Moors had ridden nearly two miles under conditions that were supposed to be impossible against modern weapons. They turned and rode back to the others up the hill on their flank amid an unceasing hail of shrappel and rifle bullets. Their leader, the Red Kaid, as the French name him, alone did not turn. Seated upon a fine horse, he fired calmly upon the French infantry, whose bullets fell in thousands around him while shells and shrapnel burst over his head and around him, tearing up the ground but not harming him. At length he turned and rode slowly for cover amid the admiring cheers of his enemies.

Casablanca says that the strategic situation is completely in the hands of the Moors, who concentrate horsemen behind complete cover and deliver attacks at unexpected places. The great guns of the warships no longer frighten the Moors. Their marksmen creep close to the crowded camp, fire a shot and then flee. Their horsemen appear boldly on the skyline of the hills, draw the fire of the French artillery and vanish, to reappear at another place a few hundred yards

It is reported that the rebellious tribes around Casablanca have received letters from Mulai Hafed, who was recently proclaimed Sultan at Marakesh, promising his early arrival among them. He advises them in the meantime to refrain from attacking the Europeans.

PARIS, Aug. 22 -Official telegrams from Casablanca confirm previous reports of the fighting yesterday Both the land and the naval artillery inflicted heavy osses on the Moors.

MEAT WAGON DRIVERS STRIKE

300 EMPLOYED BY WHOLESALE BUTCHERS QUIT.

Tieup in Carrying to the Retailers and Middiemen Results - Deadlock Over Arbi-tration Clause in Renewal of Agreement

All the union teamsters in the employ of the wholesale butchers and packers in Manhattan went on a strike at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, many of them leaving their loaded wagons in the streets. The action tied up the late afternoon delivery service of all the big companies, but the packers expect to have the wagons fully manned this morning. There is a chance, the beef cutters and the luggers will go out in sympathy, and in that event the mituation will be serious for New York meat consumers.

There are 500 of the striking teamsters and they comprise practically the entire force in the employ of the big wholesalers. They deliver the meat from the packing houses and abattoirs along the river fronts to the middlemen and the retailers throughout the city. The independent as well as the so-called trust houses are involved in the

The declaration of the strike followed a stormy meeting between representatives of the local union and the packers at the Hotel Belmont vesterday afternoon. The labor union leaders walked out of the meeting after declaring that they would force the packers and butchers to yield to their demands, and within an hour every delivery wagon in the city manned by a union drive

The employers had been in conference with the union men for five days and had made no preparations for a strike, because there had been every indication up to yesterday that all the differences would be settled amicably. The employers were represented at the meeting by W. H. Noyes of Swift & Co., L. Kirschheimer of the Schwarzschild & Sulzberger Company, Arthur Stern of Joseph Stern & Sons, W. L. McAuley of the United Dressed Beef Company, Moses Saunders of the New York Veal and Mutton Company, Leo Joseph of the New York Butchers' Dressed Beef Company and James Shannon of Joseph Shan non & Sons. The labor union delegation was headed by President Hickey of the local organization.

The working agreement which the packers had with the union expired on August 1s, and it was in regard to the terms of the new and it was in regard to the terms of the new agreement that the split occurred. The teamsters had been receiving from $17 to $20 a week under the old agreement with no definite stipulations as to the number of hours that they should work.

They demanded, in the first place, that the new agreement should provide for their employment by the hour. The packers refused to consent to this, but a compromise was finally reached by which the men were to receive the same pay as under the old agreement, but sixty-five hours were to be a week's work. Some of the men had been week's work. Some of the men had been working more than seventy hours a week. The teamsters also wanted to be relieved of some of their work in carrying the beef to and from the wagons. That work belonged to the luggers, they said.

The employers refused to give in on this point and proposed that this and all other points at issue should be submitted to an impartial board of arbitration. The packers impartial board of arbitration. The packers said that they would be perfectly willing to abide by the decision of that board. The union men refused to consent to this and, according to the packers, they refused also to accept any clause in the new agreement providing for the arbitration of differences. There was such a clause in the agreement which expired on August 14.

When the employers made it plain that they would insist upon such a provision the union men walked out of the conference, declaring that they would have an agreement that suited them or nothing.

George W. Morgan, former Superintendent of Elections, who represents ten or ent of Elections, who represents ten or twelve of the packers in a legal capacity, had this to say last night: "The employers have made all endeavors which they could reasonably to avoid a strike. They now will proceed to employ new men to take the places of their former employees. The question at issue is simply whether they as employers of labor shall be permitted by their employees to conduct their own business."

The greater part of the day's deliveried ad been diposed of when the men walked out. Most of the wagons were drawn up at the packing houses and slaughter houses for their last loads. Word was carried to the for their last loads. The drivers in First avenue, after deserting their wagons, crossed the street and jeered. The packing men had heard from the hotel, but they had expected that the drivers would finish out the day. They were in a bad fix consequently when the drivers left their partly loaded wagons. The luggers weren't any too anxious to turn in and carry the beef back into the buildings, and some of the superintendents and men from the executive offices donned aprons and put a shoulder to the task. Each firm as soon as it was able to do so communicated with its customers and urged them to send their own wagons after the meat. The teams were unharnessed from the packers' wagons and taken to the stables. Last night some of the wagons were still standing in front of the buildings. The retailers' private wagons began to

INSURGENT EMBLEMS FLOWN. Patriotic Americans in Manila Deter te Have Them Suppressed.

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN.

MANILA, Aug. 22.—The police have been ordered to suppress Katipunan (insur-rectionary) flags and emblems. It is believed that resort to drastic measures has received the approval of the authorities at Washington.

Meanwhile the veteren army and a committee formed of some of the best citizens Manila have completed arrangement for a great patriotic mass meeting. Delegations from Cavite, Fort McKinley and other nearby places will attend. The meeting will discuss means of preventing further insult to the United States flag.

The Americans here are profoundly opposed to the unlicensed exhibition of insurrectionary emblems that has been prevalent since the Assembly elections. The Philippine Commission probably will adopt some legislation against a continu ance of the practice.

The Katipunan is a revolutionary society that once was very powerful in the Philippines, and which was revived last April in the province of Laguna. It soon began to spread into other provinces, and since the success of the Nacionalistas in the Assembly elections became aggressive and impudent. Its chief emblems depict Dr. Dominador Gomez, the anti-American agitator who is now an Assemblyman-elect, and José Rizal, a Filipino rebel against the Spaniards, by whom he was put to death about twelve years ago. Its seal bears a representation of a Filipino and a Japanese clasping hands fraternally.

CURED IN THREE WEEKS BY CUTICURA REMEDIES

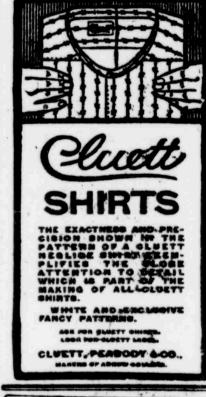

"I take great pleasure in dropping you a line to tell you what a Godsend Cuticura Re medies were for my baby. He was suffering from that terrible torture, eczema. It was all over his body in patches, but the worst was on his face and head. His face was awfully bad; the eczema extended up to the lower eyelids and I was just about sick for fear it would get into his eyes before I got it stopped. He cried and scratched all the time and could not sleep night or day from scratching. I took him to the best doctors, and one of them said that he would keep the disease till he got all of his teeth; but if I had depended on the doctors. I guess my boy would have been laid at rest by this time. My friends told me to try many kind: of remedies, and I pestered the child to death with all the different things, but could see no improvement. Finally I got discouraged, and was just about to give up all hope of his ever getting cured, when I read about the wonderful Cuticura Remedies, which came just in time to save my baby from the terrible torture. I used Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, and I saw an improvement in three days, and in three weeks his skin was as clear as it could be. That was six or seven months ago, and I have not seen any return of the disease since. I should have written long ago, but I waited to see if it would return. I shall recommend the use of Cuticura from one end of the world to the other. Mrs. Maggie Smith, 214 W. Crosier St. Akron, O., July 24 and Aug. 11, 1906."
